ACCESSORY
EQUIPMENT SUPPORT SYSTEM

The pagode Signature MKII marks a welcome return for the finite elemente brand. The German maker is still the go-to high-end equipment support manufacturer if you want a product that combines aesthetically pleasing lines and exceptionally neutral platforms. The latest pagode Signature MKII system features new and lightweight HCCT honeycomb core platforms and shelves. These internally braced platforms provide enhanced stability compared to their solid wood predecessors. These are clamped in place using 'sidespike technology,' to channel vibrational energy away from the component resting on the platform. In addition, the entire platform has been subtly improved making it look more pleasing than ever.

Calming influence

In our test, we found the pagode Signature mkII is a calming influence on the listener, thanks to an ordered, graceful and relaxed presentation. However, excitement or detail are not lost as pagode delivers excellent transient response, dynamic range, and tonal balance..

The pagode Signature MKII is a marked improvement over its predecessor. It offers a step-change in terms of design and performance, making it a worthy upgrade for those who already own the original Signature.

A lot of high-performance audio stands have more in common with oil-rigs than furniture. However, finite elemente's genius in equipment support design has always been the ability to make products that look good and sound great!
